The navigation bar includes 'Learn' (which is highlighted), 'Documentation', 'Training', 'Certifications', 'Q&A', 'Code Samples', 'Assessments', 'Shows', and 'Events'. Below the navigation, there's a sidebar with links like 'Application lifecycle management (ALM)', 'Overview', 'ALM basics', 'Environment strategy', 'Solutions', 'Tools and apps used', and 'Pipelines (preview)'. The main content area features a title 'Overview of pipelines in Power Platform (preview)' with a subtitle 'This article is pre-release documentation and is subject to change.', a date '02/06/2023', and a note about 8 minutes of reading time. On the right, there's a sidebar titled 'In this article' with sections for 'Admins centrally manage and govern pipelines', 'Makers run preconfigured pipelines', 'Developers can use the same pipelines', and 'Frequently asked questions'. A 'Show more' button is also present. On the right side of the tablet, a screenshot of the Microsoft Power Apps 'Pipelines' feature is shown. It displays a pipeline named 'ABC Pipeline' with three stages: 'Development', 'Test stage', and 'Production stage'. Each stage has a status bar indicating deployment progress. A blue banner at the bottom of the Power Apps interface says 'Important'.

Below the title is a "Join the discussion" section. A table lists six posts, each with a profile picture of a man, a subject line, the poster's role ("ADMIN" or "DavidWarner Friday"), the posting time ("48m ago" or "Friday"), and the number of replies and views.
